*Note: The Co-operative Innovation Project team (research team and project management group) comprised numerous individuals, each with significant research and practitioner breadth and depth in their own fields. For this reason, CIP acknowledges the limitations of the following reference list. We are unable to offer a bibliography comprising complete background reading by all team members that contributed to CIP.

For extensive source citations on co-operatives in Canada and around the world, see the amazing open archive research library hosted by the Canadian Co-operative Research Network at: <http://ccrn.coop/for-researchers/research-library>. The Centre for the Study of Co-operatives also maintains an extensive on-line library of their publications.
